To all: FYI. Do you want to identify any posts? No
JSWNo. This is not the point. Problem is that someone in OMS should at least ask employees what potential problems exist that would prevent or mitigate against overseas assignment. Our problems have stemmed from obvious cases.
mNo need to identify posts. [redacted] told me that he would take a serious look at their review procedure.

Selection Process for Overseas Service

Your Memorandum of 26 November 1980, Same Subject

1. All applicants are considered psychiatrically before employment and are not accepted as employees unless they can perform in a full-duty general capacity both in the United States and overseas. For economic reasons neither OMS nor other evaluating components of the Agency screen the dependents prior to employment; to do so would probably double the cost of recruitment. Most components feel that the three-year probationary period provides sufficient family screening, especially if there is an overseas assignment.

3. OMS is currently reviewing its psychiatric evaluation procedures and will be contacting other components to determine if they perceive needs similar to your own.
